

The background image shows a construction site with two large blue Aggreko equipment units. One is a generator with multiple fans on top, and the other is a storage container. Two workers in orange safety vests are standing between them. The site is near a body of water with some rocks and vegetation.

Statement on environmental fees

At Aggreko, respecting our environment is an important part of how we do business. This means protecting the environment by preventing or minimizing pollution, continually improving our operations and processes and being a good steward in the communities in which we operate.

In our daily operations, we handle a considerable quantity of fuel, oil, refrigerants, cleaners and other potentially hazardous materials. If these supplies are not appropriately disposed of, they can cause environmental damage such as leakage into the ground water and contamination of local water supplies. If left unattended, they are also unsightly, typically not biodegradable and can pose a safety hazard. To reduce the impact of our operations, we incur significant expenses, direct and indirect, maintaining our commitment to operate in an environmentally sound manner. These expenses include, but are not limited to, ongoing compliance with federal, state and local environmental laws, regulations and rules, continued investment in more fuel-efficient equipment, and proper and safe construction of our facilities, maintenance and cleaning of our equipment and removal and disposal of waste products.

To help offset those expenses, we charge a reasonable environmental fee on all equipment that could have an environmental impact. THE FEE IS NOT A TAX OR OTHER GOVERNMENTAL CHARGE. It is not tied to any particular direct or indirect cost of serving our customers, and is not dedicated to any particular purpose or account. We use the revenue associated with the fee to achieve an acceptable operating margin while fostering environmentally sound business practices, and we reserve the right in our reasonable discretion to change the amount of the fee on a per-transaction basis.
